Quarantaine diary by Inés Legemaate

April 2020

Day one: I squirm while I fix a zip and tell a bad vague joke. (I act as usual)

This is a Pangram¹. Try to

This is a Pangram¹. Try to which which every letter

which which every letter

given alore

make sense of it.

[Pangram is a which you use every letter of a given alphabet at least once]

After 24 hours I start to make myself big fan of politicians speeches. free documentaries, free online courses, free tutorials, free whatever.

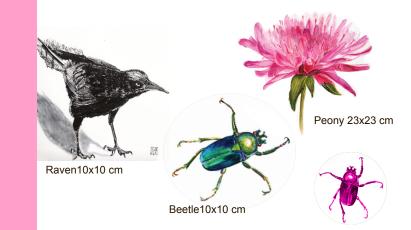

M. Rutte - Prime Minister of The Netherlands Original: ink on paper

In these chaotic moments Lola is a big inspiration to me: I try to keep "dancing" no matter what.]

Day seven: Covid jeopardizes humans and we queue for extra kilos grain.

(I start to alienate)

I produce flowers and insects, besides some human portraits. I also start to converse with my neighbour downstairs, who paciently throws me back my tennis ball (I started to play on my 6 m² terrace).

Day fifteen: I explore Zoom to teach squats and jacks, hoping virus will not bow me out.

(I start to accomodate)

I offer you the next image so you can frame it and have a mini print of mine

Day twenty-one: I zap fake messages, converse, do exercice, adjust, wished to have gi and aplomb. (I start to react)

Beetle Watercolor

All drawings and paintings are for sale Peony Watercolor

80 € 40 €

Moon Light Linocut Raven Ink on paper 40€ 30 €

I rethink new survival strategies for the future while I try to keep focused on my projects and start to home-train seriously again. I also take my 15 minutes sun dose and thank whoever to have a small terrace and a balcony, both considered luxury in these days. Shipping costs are not included Frame is not included The artist reserves herself the right of reproducing and making copies of the originals.

See you in my web

www.ineslegemaate.com

Or Instagram

Click on here and follow me!

@ines.legemaate