Picasso [1881 - 1973]
Some say he created more than 45.000 art pieces. He lived in both Boisgeloup and Vauvenargues castles. I think that where you live also determines what you create.

Seen in Arenys de Munt.

It is strange how I perceive objects in a different way, appealing my changed soul.

Shhhh, don’t tell anyone: if you cut this one out and frame it, you can have a small print of this 23 cm. width x 23.3 cm. height original.

I remember places and stories related to them after having painted or drawn them, more vividly than when I take pictures.

Dreaming surrounded by ancient castle walls.

Years passed,
they stayed,
they still comfort us.

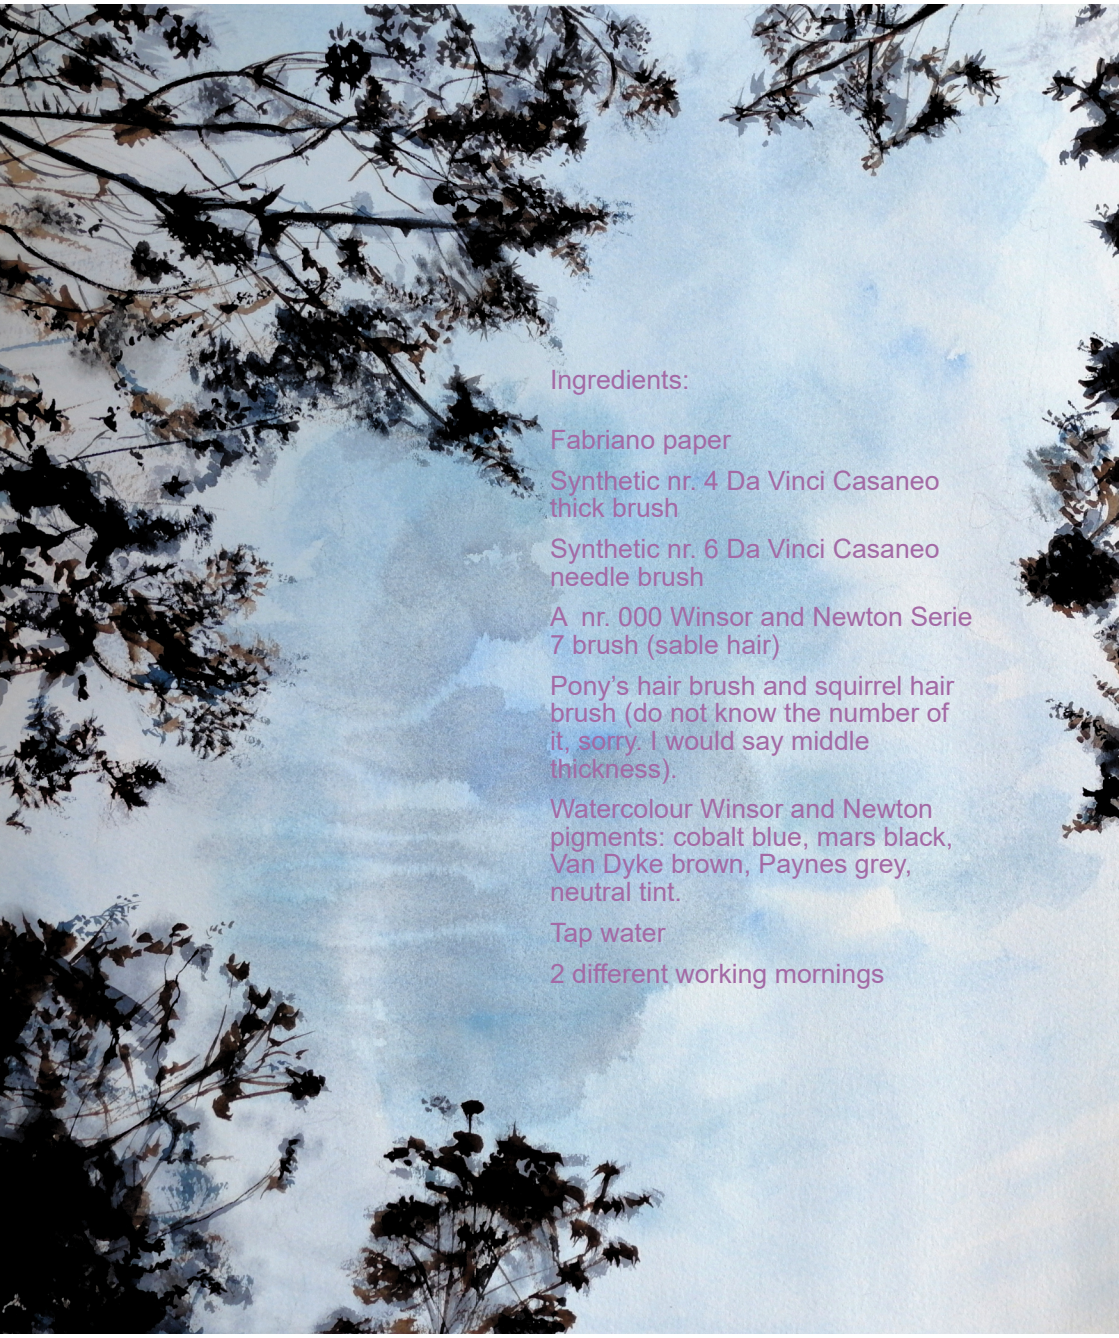
I discovered the ruins of Sant Iscles castle, in Vidreres. It is not as one of the XVIIth still habitable castles Picasso lived in, but it truly inspired me.



Life. Immense.

Lucky me I got there, lucky friends I have that took me there.

There are so many routes to discover in the Parc del Montnegre i Corredor.
Round 270 km. paths to walk.

Dear sea, dear beach, dear sand, you give me such beautiful gifts. Gifts that are jewels to me.

Garlic bought at the local open air market
Local food, local people. Establishing roots and connections.
Staying tuned with the world around us.

The first time I saw a real handmade all i oli (garlic mayonnaise) was at a construction site: they celebrated they had finished the roof and it was tradition to have a big meal at place. I could have just eaten bread dipped in all i oli.

Portraiting as a synonym of relaxing moment or, more precisely, time lap

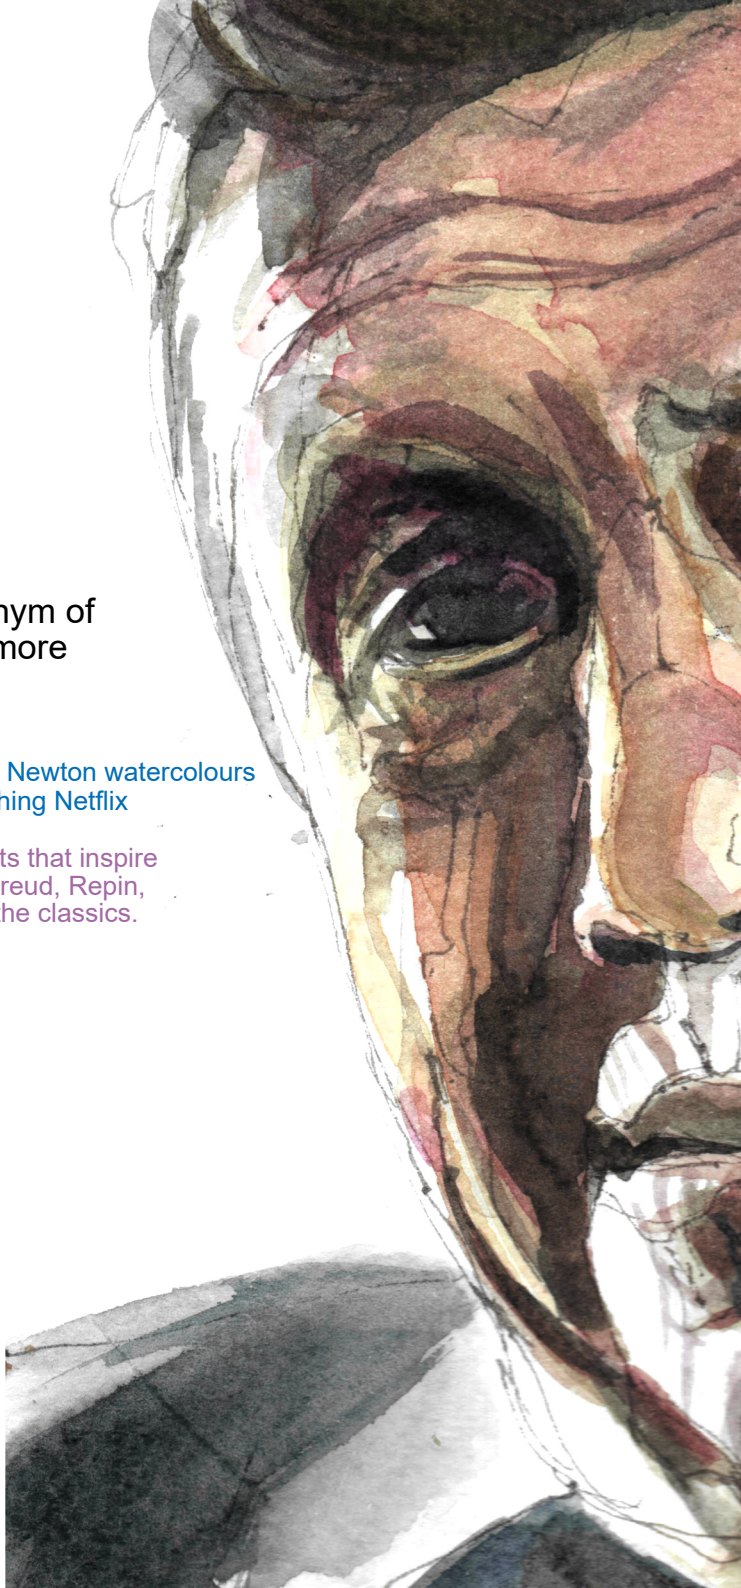
These are some of the artists that inspire me to do portraits: Tapiró, Freud, Repin, Rembrandt, Michelangelo, the classics.



Each line counts: a year, an experience, an emotion

Arenas [1920 - 1998]

As most of many artists, he was versatile. I wonder what instruments did he play. I hardly play the ukulele, but when I practice constantly I can experience moments of trance, like when I am painting or drawing.
